

63rd LMHI WORLD CONGRESS 2008 Evidence Based Homoeopathy

20-24 May, Oostende, Belgium

LAW OF SIMILARS

Minimal Syndrom
of Maximal Value

Patient's Reactional
and Qualitative Totality

Remedy's Genius

Remedy's
Reactional
and Qualitative Totality

PATIENT

REMEDY

Information Dissolves Malignant Tissues

Dietmar Payrhuber,¹ Michael Frass,² Pierre Madl³

¹ Medical Practitioner, Eduard Baumgartner-Str. 8, A-5020 Salzburg, Austria. payrhuber@gmx.net

² Institute for Homeopathic Research, Austria. michael.frass@homresearch.org

³ University of Salzburg, Department of Material Sciences, Division Physics & Biophysics, Hellbrunnerstr. 34; Austria. pierre.madl@sbg.ac.at

The focus of our observation is the atom, which implies information. It has structure (H.P. DÜRR), which can be altered by a potentized substance containing information. The mental constitution of the patient, which is partly conscious, partly unconscious may represent the very source of one's disease and indicates a specific remedy. The local symptoms are influenced by the mental constitution of the patient and are included in the overall picture of the disease. To indicate the appropriate remedy, history-taking is therefore primarily based on the life conflict and the mental constitution of the patient. By using this method, potentized remedies may show a deep action on the life-conflict of the patient and may be capable even to dissolve malignant tissues to restore health. For example, derivatives of iodine are able to dissolve malignant manifestations of Hodgkin's disease. The particular message of iodine may give the patient the strength and ability to alter and revise one's opinion as well as one's mental concept. Other salts, which contain particular information may be able to alter malignant tissues in brain tumors and transform them into necrotic residues. Yet again other salts may stop progressive osteolysis or dissolve bone metastasis. The action of a potentized remedy on mind and body is of highest rank, and restores health on all levels. Consequently we trigger a deeper healing effect than molecular biology does by solely influencing the chemical language at the cellular level. These elements / salts are simple in their structure (atoms, molecules), but at the same time the given minerals are likewise associated to the patient's life conflict. Indeed, we compare the energized state of the mineral with the mental constitution of the patient, which is similar to a theme, an archetype. Information originating from a higher dimensional reality may be projected onto a screen perceived as a mental or physical entity (D. BOHM). The tumor may be suggested as a local symptom as a result of the disturbed life-force (C. BURNETT) and only as part of the system. Since elements and minerals are the tiniest and most archaic units, out of which life is made, the potentized forms may represent pristine archetypes, which have profound organizing capacities.

KEYWORDS – Atom, Archetype, Matter and Consciousness, Higher-dimensional reality